Rejects Henrico's Narrow Lines, and Will Press Court Proceedings.

With several of the suburbs clamor-ing for admission into the city limits and all others out of the fight in op-position to the Richmond annexation and all others out of the fight in opposition to the Richmond annexation program, Henrico County stands alone, the only opponent to the proposition to make Richmond one of the greatest cities in the South. Indications that the county will also concede certain things for which it is now holding out were given yesterday, when attorneys for Henrico and Richmond met and discussed plans for a compromise. Henrico made the proposition, which called for the omission of Ginter Park, practically all of the West End annexation beyond the Belt Line, and a great deal of other proposed territory. The proposition was promptly rejected by City Attorney Pollard, and the case will be continued in the Henrico County Circuit Court this morning, with Chief Health Officer E. C. Levy on the stand.

Some concessions, but when City Attorney Pollard leasned the extent of the county's demands he immediately announced that Richmond could not accede to them. He offered to draw the line of annexation so that certain portions of the properties, which the county desires to remain in Henrico would be left out, but this was not agreeable, and the session ended without result, other than to bring more widly to light the willingness of the townships to become a part of the county to fight for every inch.

Shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon Judge Campbell, W. T. Dabage, business manager of the Chamber of Commerce, and attorneys representing Richmond and the opposing interests went for a tour of inspection of the proposed lines of annexation. The entire route was covered, as Judge Campbell desired to see for himself the ground over which there has been so much discussion. The various interests represented in the case were glad to have the court make the tour of inspection, and it is probable that another tour will be taken before the case is finally determined.

ROAD IS REJECTED

The committee voted to reject a resolution sent to it by the Richmond Chamber of Commerce recommending an appropriation to aid in the repair and maintenance of part of the Richmond-to-Petersburg highway. The committee was of the opinion that it was beyond the city's province to appropriate money from the treasury in the aid of roads outside the city limits.

From the Administrative Roard was reported a resolution recommending that the Council make an appropriation of $75,000 to grade, gravel, curb and gutter certain proposed streets through the Sheppard tract, bounded by West Street, Roseneath Road, Broad Street and Monument Avenue. On this basis of computation, West Virginia's portion of the $20,810,357.98 of assets of the old Commonwealth would amount to $4,855,312.18. This, asserts West Virginia, should be deducted from its apportioned share of the liabilities, $7,182,507.46, leaving an excess of $2,327,195.28 of Babilities over assets. This $2,327,195.28, it is claimed, represents West Virginia's real debt to Virginia.
